The two great political parties have each a score or more of aspirants, and the inde pendents, or as yet unformed third party have their representative men. In the Re publican list we have the following: President Grant, Ex-Speaker Blaine, Minister Washburne, Secretary Bristow, Senators Conkling, Morton and Frelinghuysen, Ex-Gov. Morgan, Generals Hartrauft and Haves, and B. F. Butler. The Democrats have entered Gov. Tilden, Senators Thurman and Bayard, William Allen, Governor Hendricks, General Hancock and Geo. H Pendleton. The Springfield Republican. which is the organ of the Independents, has nominated Charles Francis Adams. Among the number in each list are excellent men. who would creditably fill the presidential office; others are indifferently good, and some are positively bad. In the use of the terms good and bad in this connection, we have sole reference to character and ability sufficient for the high position for which sent the lowest elements and the worst teners as the nominees, the contest would not be one of humiliation and shame for that self-respecting portion of the community

THIS Mixed spice, so generally used throughout Europe, is simply Pure Ground Cultivated Spices, combined and so proportionately blended that the full flavor of each spice is retained without that the full flavor of each spice is retained without any predominating.

Its introduction into this country supplies a want long relt. It is well known that the best cooks in the foliage pastrice, not knowing the relative strength of the pastrice, not one or too little of another, rendering their pudding or whatever they are making, harsh and disagreeable to the tasks with one or two strong flavors, which completely overcome the more delicate and desirable ones. This English Mixed Spice gives a pleasant, rich, uniform flavor to everything in which it is used, and is highly recommended for family and hotel use.

There are no directions, simply put in enough to sait the taste. It is put up in quarter pound tins. Imported by PICKEY, JACKSON & CO., 38 Reade Street, New York.

After all, it was only as he said, a short afsherman's daughter, herself bred among all the hardy associations of the sea, should dread. Had she herself not sailed away to the mackerel grounds, and time after time been rocked on the bosom of the storm and the deep? Far from her thoughts was any such mischance as that which was to inspire her husband to perform a deed, one of the most remarkable in the chronicles of the times.

It would be worth a special article to paint in words, with the same spirited and picturesque touch with which Norton and De Haas put similar scenes on canvas, life on board the fishing-deet off the coast of Maine or Massachusetts. The same now as it was 100 years ago, we can easily fancy the scene so realistic, yet so poetic—the

The same now as it was 100 years ago, we can easily fancy the scene so realistic, yet so poetic—the staunch smacks riding at anchor looming up like phantoms through the gray mist as they rock on the long, lazy swell, or dancing on waves that leap and exult under the flash of noontide, the hoarse cries that pass from boat to boat, the wild life of the seas tamed down into a shy hondays and an unseemly profanity, he was bound either pass from boat to boat, the wild life of the seas tamed down into a shy bondage and sympathy with the human life which builds a brief village over its treacherous foam.

But Abner Taft and his sturdy mates though deeply and humbly conscious of the beauty and terror of the ocean, as all men of the sea are, had other thoughts to absorb them. To perform their work speedily, to catch and pack their boat load of the flavored while went to see the season of the seas to notice the strange events going on above them, but the noise of the hammers spiking the hatches, the rolling of the carronades, and the flapping of the yards impressed at last their drunken senses with the alarming truth. With the instincts of discipline and obedience, the crew, in their alarm and amazement, waited for orders from their superiors.

tinguished social and political circles, where he passed many pleasant hours discoursing and discussing intellectual and scientific subjects—chemistry, surgery, and once, among other things, the use and misuse of poisons cropped up in the course of conversation; and some one present, a gentleman of some note and importance—asked what was the quickest and easiest death to die.—The subject was freely debated.

One evening he returned from one of those pleasant gatherings, and in a reflecting mood of mind sat for an hour looking over the moonlit city, and the beautiful, world-

It would be hard to tell how much of the prevalent sickness and mortality from diphtheria is due to such want of thought. As a rule, adults have the disease in so mild a form that they mistake it for a simple cold; and as a cold is not contagious, they think nothing of exposing others to their breath, or to the greater danger of labial contact. Taking into consideration the well established for that diphtheria is usually, if not always communicated by the direct transplanting of the malignant vegetation which causes the disease, the fact there can be no more certainty of bringing the contagion to its favorite soil than the act of kissing, and the further fact that the custom of kissing children on all occasions is all but univereal, it is not surprising that, when the discontinuation of the question with both hands to the old gentleman's legs.
